Dean Blake Morant was recently selected for the prestigious Equal Justice Works’ John R. Kramer Outstanding Law School Dean Award. This award honors a law school dean who has successfully demonstrated leadership in building an institution that nurtures and fortifies a spirit of public service during his or her tenure at an Equal Justice Works participating member law school. The mission of Equal Justice Works is to create a just society by mobilizing the next generation of lawyers committed to equal justice. It provides leadership to ensure a sustainable pipeline of talented and trained lawyers involved in public service.

The Student Executive Board of the Pro Bono Project decided to nominate Dean Morant for this award in part because of his significant role in supporting the establishment of the Pro Bono Project and Public Interest Initiative last year combined with his other many accomplishments in other areas across the law school and the profession. With the blessing and support of Wake Forest University President Nathan O. Hatch and law school deans Ann Gibbs, Suzanne Reynolds, and Ronald Wright, a nomination package was prepared by the Pro Bono Project’s Public Relations Coordinator, which chronicled the many achievements of Dean Morant’s administration. Letters of support were provided by President Hatch and Deans Gibbs and Reynolds.

Some of the key accomplishments highlighted in the nomination package include: 1) establishing a vision for the law school that incorporates a strong commitment to pro bono service, public interest careers, and community outreach, 2) creating field work opportunities for students through the establishment of Community Law & Business Clinic, the Innocence & Justice Clinic, and the D.C. Metropolitan Externship program, 3) promoting community outreach and public service careers through the establishment of the Pro Bono Project, the Public Interest Initiative, and the Public Interest Retreat and the hiring of a Director of Outreach, and 4) promoting scholarship in the area of public interest law through the establishment of the Journal of Law and Policy.

Dean Blake Morant Wins Equal Justice Works’ Prestigious John R. Kramer Outstanding Law School Dean Award

Dean Blake Morant will receive this prestigious award at the Equal Justice Works Awards Dinner on Oct. 21 at the Ronald Reagan International Trade Building. Eight hundred people are expected to be in attendance, many from big law firms and corporations, as well as one hundred and fifty present and former Equal Justice Works fellows. Tickets for the dinner celebration are available at http://www.equaljusticeworks.org/dinner10/tickets.html.

The past five recipients of the Outstanding Law School Dean Award include some of the fields’ best known and most respected law school deans, such as Larry Kramer of Stanford Law School in 2009, Elena Kagan of Harvard Law School in 2008, Karen Rothenberg of the University of Maryland School of Law in 2007, Katharine Bartlett of Duke University School of Law in 2006, and Gene R. Nichol of University of North Carolina School of Law in 2005.

THE AWARD

Dean Blake Morant Wins Equal Justice Works’ Prestigious John R. Kramer Outstanding Law School Dean Award

Dean Blake Morant was recently selected for the prestigious Equal Justice Works’ John R. Kramer Outstanding Law School Dean Award. This award honors a law school dean who has successfully demonstrated leadership in building an institution that nurtures and fortifies a spirit of public service during his or her tenure at an Equal Justice Works participating member law school. The mission of Equal Justice Works is to create a just society by mobilizing the next generation of lawyers committed to equal justice. It provides leadership to ensure a sustainable pipeline of talented and trained lawyers involved in public service.

The Student Executive Board of the Pro Bono Project decided to nominate Dean Morant for this award in part because of his significant role in supporting the establishment of the Pro Bono Project and Public Interest Initiative last year combined with his other many accomplishments in other areas across the law school and the profession. With the blessing and support of Wake Forest University President Nathan O. Hatch and law school deans Ann Gibbs, Suzanne Reynolds, and Ronald Wright, a nomination package was prepared by the Pro Bono Project’s Public Relations Coordinator, which chronicled the many achievements of Dean Morant’s administration. Letters of support were provided by President Hatch and Deans Gibbs and Reynolds.

Some of the key accomplishments highlighted in the nomination package include: 1) establishing a vision for the law school that incorporates a strong commitment to pro bono service, public interest careers, and community outreach, 2) creating field work opportunities for students through the establishment of Community Law & Business Clinic, the Innocence & Justice Clinic, and the D.C. Metropolitan Externship program, 3) promoting community outreach and public service careers through the establishment of the Pro Bono Project, the Public Interest Initiative, and the Public Interest Retreat and the hiring of a Director of Outreach, and 4) promoting scholarship in the area of public interest law through the establishment of the Journal of Law and Policy.
NEW BEGINNINGS

During the 2009-2010 academic year, Wake Forest University School of Law introduced two new public service organizations, the Pro Bono Project (PBP) and the Public Interest Initiative (PII). The programs resulted from the initiative of a small group of students, who approached faculty about creating a formal program to provide students with increased opportunities to use their legal education in service to the community. With approval from Dean Blake Morant, the Pro Bono/ Public Interest Committee was created as a first step.

The committee determined that because pro bono service is part of the professional responsibility of all practicing attorneys, it was important to promote pro bono opportunities to all students, regardless of whether they planned to practice in the public or private sector. The Committee which was comprised of four faculty members and five students began implementing a plan to create the PBP and PII organizations.

Both organizations are run by student leaders with significant faculty supervision and support. These organizations had exciting starts in their inaugural year and now look forward to expanding their efforts in the coming year. To assist in this expansion, Wake Law welcomes Professor Beth Hopkins to serve as Director of Outreach. She began her service in July 2010.

THE INAUGURAL ISSUE

WELCOME!

Wake Forest University School of Law, students, faculty, and esteemed alumni, greetings from the Pro Bono Project and the Public Interest Initiative. Most students and alumni are familiar with the university motto, Pro Humanitate (“for humanity”). Indeed, those words are spoken on a daily basis at the law school and provide a constant reminder to all of the responsibilities that accompany the privilege of membership in the bar. Fewer are likely familiar with the law school’s motto, Pro Iustitia (“in service of justice”).

To serve justice is to serve the American principle of “equal justice under law.” This phrase is engraved on the front of the United States Supreme Court and the idea of equality before the law hearkens back to the dawn of western civilization. Many recognize Pericles’s funeral oration in 430 B.C. as one of the earliest discussions of the concept. Pericles said, “Our constitution does not copy the laws of neighbouring states; we are rather a pattern to others than imitators ourselves. Its administration favours the many instead of the few; this is why it is called a democracy. If we look to the laws, they afford equal justice to all in their private differences.” (Thucydides, The History of the Peloponnesian War, translated by Richard Crawley (1874)).

As cherished as this concept is to our system of government and our way of life, it is difficult to image how all can be treated equally under the law, when all people cannot afford the same quality of legal services or any legal services at all. For that reason, the Pro Bono Project and the Public Interest Initiative were started at Wake Forest last year through the efforts of student and faculty leaders with the support of the Office of the Dean.

The Pro Bono Project was established to not only catalog the ongoing pro bono and service efforts of students and faculty, but also to innovate and create new opportunities. This includes providing an interface for students and project sponsors to help streamline the delivery of those services by placing students with lawyers on pro bono cases, hosting pro bono service events, and planning week long service trips throughout the year. The Public Interest Initiative was started with the goal of promoting public interest careers, by exposing students to career opportunities, public interest leaders, grant and fellowship opportunities, mentoring, skill development, and volunteer opportunities.

Wake Law has always prided itself on educating not just skilled attorneys but “citizen lawyers” who are capable of filling crucial advisory roles within their communities. As Dean Blake Morant would say, this is all part of Wake’s “educative mission,” a mission that is sensitive to the historical position that lawyers once held in society at a time when lawyers were truly “professionals,” highly respected and trusted like medical doctors. In fact, law was among the three classical professions: Divinity, Medicine, and Law.

Many of our best lawyers in academia, government, non-profit, and private practice are working to reclaim that exalted status for our profession, through their daily work, volunteerism to bar associations, community and civic organizations and boards, and through pro bono service and public interest careers. More important than status, however, is results and the goal of Pro Bono Project and Public Interest Initiative is the achievement of equal justice under law by promoting and assisting with the delivery of free or low-cost legal services.

As our organizations grow, we plan to be innovative and original in our efforts to deliver pro bono services and promote the public interest. We want to set an example “as a pattern to others,” rather than “imitators ourselves.” In doing so, we hope to use our knowledge of the law and our institutional strengths to “afford equal justice to all,” despite their “private differences.”

This year, both organizations have big plans and expect to build even greater enthusiasm and momentum for their programs. We expect to publish this newsletter periodically in order to keep the Wake Law community, our alumni, and our community partners informed about what we are doing and how they can get involved, stay informed, or support our efforts.

In our first newsletter you will find highlights from the past year, some of our plans for the future, and different ways to get involved. Wake Law has a strong tradition of promoting the university’s motto, Pro Humanitate, and we hope that through our Pro Bono and Public Interest programs we can continue and strengthen this tradition.
Pro Bono Competition

On Jan. 18, 2010, students and faculty crowded into the large courtroom for the official kickoff of the Pro Bono Project. To focus participation, the PBP sponsored a competition among the students and the class with the highest percentage of participation winning a ‘kegs on the courtyard’ party with Dean Morant. Students worked with private law firms in bankruptcy and family law, Legal Aid of North Carolina in Winston-Salem, and other projects sponsored by student organizations such as Volunteer Income Tax Assistance and Wills for Heroes.

Students logged more than 1,000 hours of pro bono work during the past academic year. The first-year class (2012) took top honors. Of 154 students, 40, or nearly 26 percent, took part in the competition by completing a project. The second-year class had a participation rate of 22 percent, and the third-year class had a participation rate of 8 percent.

Addressing the 1L class at their courtyard celebration, Dean Morant praised the competition’s success and optimistically looked forward to next year’s competition. He said, “We know the numbers will be up as this event becomes a tradition at Wake Forest Law, but on behalf of the Pro Bono committee, let me say how pleased we are with the first-time results.”

The Wake Law community has always been engaged and will continue to be engaged in a variety of pro bono and community service initiatives and the Pro Bono Project will serve to encourage those ongoing efforts and provide new opportunities through programs like the Pro Bono Competition. By providing structure, funding, and enthusiastic support to such efforts, the POP will help connect even larger numbers of students with lawyers and organizations engaged in pro bono work.

Volunteer Income Tax Assistance

Wake Forest University School of Law’s student division of the North Carolina Bar Association teamed up with Legal Aid of North Carolina to offer free tax preparation for eligible individuals and families in Forsyth, Davie, Iredell, Stokes, Surry and Yadkin counties. As part of the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program, law students provided free tax assistance to those with low to moderate incomes, generally $49,000 and below. Twenty-five law students provided 100 hours of service to over 50 families.

2009-2010 ACCOMPLISHMENTS

On Jan. 12, 2010, a devastating earthquake struck Haiti. One week later, Special Trips Coordinator, Michael Lennox (’11), announced his plans to coordinate an effort for Wake Forest law students to travel to Miami over Spring Break. Lennox consulted with Wake Law professor Margaret Taylor, a specialist in immigration law. Taylor knew that the Obama Administration had just announced that Haitians already in the United States (U.S.) would be able to register for Temporary Protected Status (TPS) in order to legally work and remain in the U.S. for up to eighteen months. Excited by Lennox’s idea, she posted a message to the immigration law professor list-serve, inquiring whether other schools were interested in sending students to help register Haitians for TPS over spring break. This inquiry sparked an overwhelming response and according to Taylor, “it was Michael’s initiative that got the ball rolling in Miami and elsewhere for law students across the country to join this effort.”

In March, ten Wake law students went with Lennox to Miami. Law professors Rebecca Sharpless of the University of Miami School of Law, and Troy Elder of Florida International University School of Law, coordinated the effort in Miami, connecting students from all over the country with the NGOs who were assisting Haitians with TPS, ensuring that students were trained and that clinics were held during their stay. Forty-two students from seven schools participated overall. Wake Forest had the largest group of student volunteers. Over eighty individuals and their families were directly assisted by the TPS drives held in Miami and students helped process an additional 1,300 applications that had been filled out, but not yet entered into a database overseen by Catholic Legal Services. Wake law students were also part of a group of ten volunteers who went to a small, somewhat remote, and impoverished town called Belle Glade to engage in direct outreach with the large Haitian population there.
THANKS TO PARTNERS AND SUPPORTERS

The Pro Bono/Public Interest Committee would like to thank all the attorneys and organizations that provided support, particularly those who participated in the Public Interest Retreat and provided pro bono projects for students.

Special thanks also to Dean Sylvia Novinsky, Assistant Dean for Public Service Programs and Seema Kakad, Director of the Pro Bono Board at UNC School of Law in Chapel Hill, NC for providing us with some of their secrets for running exceptional public service programs.

We would also like to acknowledge the work of our faculty members, Dean Ann Gibbs, and Professors Jennifer Collins, Michael Green, John Knox, and Wendy Parker, as well as our graduating student members, Jennifer Hansen ('10) (co-founder) and Al Lamarque ('10).

THE ORGANIZATION

The Pro Bono Project places law students with attorneys in non-profit organizations, private practice, and North Carolina's legal services organizations.

The Pro Bono Project’s goal is to provide students with valuable hands-on experience, while also helping to provide clients with high quality, low cost legal representation by assisting attorneys with their pro bono work, thus allowing them to take on more pro bono cases that they might be able to.

NATIONAL PRO BONO WEEK

The second annual National Pro Bono Week will be held Oct. 24-30, 2010. http://www.probono.net/celebrateprobono/ Wake Forest’s Pro Bono Project will host David Smith for a discussion on the importance of pro bono work.

Mr. Smith is a partner at Kilpatrick Stockton LLP and adjunct faculty at Wake Forest School of Law. He is one of the attorneys representing the plaintiffs in Cobell v. Salazar, a class action case involving about 500,000 Native American beneficiaries of the Individual Indian trust. A settlement agreement provides that the federal government will create a $1.4 billion Accounting/Trust Administration Fund and a $2 billion Trust Land Consolidation Fund. The Settlement also creates an Indian Education Scholarship fund of up to $60 million to improve access to higher education for Indians. Along with numerous other awards, Mr. Smith has been honored as the N.C. Lawyer of the Year by the Legal Aid Society of Northwest North Carolina and the Kilpatrick Stockton Managing Partner’s Award for Pro Bono Legal Services.

More information on Wake Forest’s pro bono celebration will be on the Pro Bono Project’s website.

CO-SPONSOR OF AN IMMIGRATION PANEL DISCUSSION

The Pro Bono Project and Public Interest Initiative co-sponsored a panel discussion on Arizona’s new immigration policy along with other university wide groups on Sept. 21, 2010. This event created an interesting dialogue regarding the impact of Arizona’s new immigration policy, which has generated nationwide debate.

Sponsors: Office of Multicultural Affairs

Wake Forest School of Law Pro Bono Project
Wake Forest School of Law Public Interest Initiative
Wake Forest College Republicans
Organization for Latin American Students

Panel Members:
Wake Forest School of Law Professor Margaret Taylor
Forsyth County Sheriff William Schatzman
Forsyth County Commissioner Debra Conrad
The Mexican Consul General of the Carolinas Carlos Flores-Vizacarr
Bryan School of Business, UNC Greensboro, Professor H. Nolo Martinez, PhD

PROJECT HOMELESS CONNECT

Project Homeless Connect is United Way’s one stop, one shop event held each April to provide a wide array of services including medical care, housing, food, clothing, and other supportive services to help end chronic homelessness. The Pro Bono Project partnered with the United Way to screen candidates for criminal expungements. Helen Parsonage of Elliot Pishko Morgan, P.A. helped students identify the requirements for an expungement.

PRO BONO COMPETITION

Due to the success of last year’s Pro Bono Competition, another class competition will commence this fall. This time it will be a year-long competition between the classes and students will begin logging hours in September. See information on getting involved below.

SPECIAL TRIPS

The Pro Bono Project will sponsor two spring break service trips, one of which will be held somewhere in North Carolina. See information on getting involved below.

2010-2011 PRO BONO PROJECT STUDENT EXECUTIVE BOARD

Jackie Willingham ('11)                    Director
Professor Beth Hopkins                    Director of Outreach
Michael Lennox ('11) and Kaitlyn Girard ('12) Special Trips Coordinators
Lamar Armstrong ('11)                    Attorney/Organizations Coordinator
Nora Ryan ('11), Erika Moses ('12) and Jess Kimble ('12) Group Projects Coordinators
Craig Principe ('12)                    Public Relations Coordinator
Sara Riley ('12)                        3L Class Coordinator
Katherine Barber ('12)                    2L Class Coordinator
TBD                                      1L Class Coordinator

2010-2011 GOALS AND EVENTS
LENDING A HELPING HAND

Students and faculty from the Wake Forest School of Law work on a Habitat for Humanity house in Winston-Salem on Aug. 18.

PRO BONO PROJECTS, WORKSHOPS AND SPONSORSHIPS

GET INVOLVED

SUBMIT A PROJECT

Attorney sponsored pro bono projects are the cornerstone of the Pro Bono Project. We need your assistance to keep this program strong by providing pro bono projects to Wake Law students. As you perform your regular pro bono work, why not enlist the help of a Wake Law student? You will be making an even greater contribution to the community by helping educate future attorneys and by instilling in them a sense of duty for pro bono service. At the same time, you can accomplish more in your pro bono efforts, by receiving legal research and other assistance from your assigned student. To request assistance from a law student for your pro bono project – submit a request using the request form on the Pro Bono Project web page at http://law.wfu.edu/probono/request/.

SPONSORSHIPS

There are several ways to sponsor the Pro Bono Project. You can sponsor a student to attend the winter or spring break pro bono service trip and your funds will help offset programming and student travel expenses. You can also make a gift to the Pro Bono Project which will be used to fund programming or offset start-up costs for future pro bono projects. You may also wish to sponsor a fellowship grant, which could be awarded to students who initiate their own comprehensive pro bono project. If you are interested in any kind of sponsorship opportunity, contact Professor Beth Hopkins, hopkinmn@wfu.edu.

SUBMIT A WORKSHOP EVENT

Volunteer to supervise a community education/workshop clinic to meet community needs. If you are interested in supervising law students providing educational programs or services, contact Professor Beth Hopkins, hopkinmn@wfu.edu.
Wake's New Director of Outreach

Beth Hopkins

Dean Blake Morant hired Professor Beth Hopkins to be the new Director of Outreach for the Pro Bono Project. Professor Hopkins has longstanding ties to Wake Forest and the Winston-Salem community. She is a cum laude graduate of Wake Forest University and has served as Of Counsel in the university’s Legal Department and as Professor of Practice in the History Department and at the Law School. Prior to returning to the university she served as Assistant U.S. Attorney in both Shreveport, LA and Richmond, VA.

Additionally, Professor Hopkins has served on the Board of Directors for numerous community organizations including the Maya Angelou Research Center, the N.C. Food Bank, and Senior Services, Inc. among others. She is also active in numerous other community organizations as a member. Professor Hopkins was selected to serve as Director of Outreach, because of her exceptional ability to forge relationships, to manage multiple responsibilities and priorities, and to function as both an administrator and an educator. Dean Morant has described Professor Hopkins as “the perfect candidate” for the position.

Professor Hopkins recently contributed a chapter to History of Wake Forest, Volume V and will be featured in the next issue of Wake Forest Jurist magazine. If you are interested in partnering with the Pro Bono Project, please contact Professor Hopkins directly at hopkinmn@wfu.edu.

Founding the Organization

The Public Interest Initiative was established last year by Jennifer Hansen ('10). After helping to found the Pro Bono Committee, Jennifer focused her passion for public interest work on establishing a second organization dedicated to helping Wake students explore the possibilities of careers in public interest. Through her motivation and vision, Jennifer took an idea and turned it into a thriving organization, which has already accomplished a lot and has lofty goals for the future.

2009-2010 Accomplishments

First Inaugural Public Interest Retreat

Last year’s most noteworthy accomplishment was the law school’s first annual Public Interest Retreat. Originally scheduled for Feb. 12 and 13, it was delayed until April 9 and 10 due to severe snowfall throughout the eastern seaboard. Fortunately, this did not prevent the day and a half long retreat from going forward, because if it had, students would have missed out on a fantastic experience.

The retreat’s keynote speaker was Brett Loftis ('00), the Executive Director for the Council for Children’s Rights in Charlotte. Mr. Loftis was both entertaining and inspiring as he spoke of how his education from Wake Law enabled him to follow his childhood dream of being a “lawyer for kids.” He pointed to key faculty members who supported his aspirations and explained how he relied on professional mentors in order to become youngest director of his organization. Mr. Loftis also gave crucial career planning advice and emphasized the personal satisfaction he derives from his daily work.

Additional guests included Christine Bischoff ('04), an attorney for the U.S. Department of Education’s Office for Civil Rights; Virginia H. Johnson ('85), Senior Advisor for Legislative Affairs, U.S. Department of Defense, Defense Security Service; Shaka Mitchell ('04), a national and local education policy strategist; and Katie Kayser ('02), Assistant Attorney General for the North Carolina Department of Justice. Guest speakers gave presentations and then led small discussion groups designed to help Wake Forest students identify potential career interests and determine how to best position themselves to develop skills, demonstrate interest in public interest careers, and to ultimately achieve their career goals. The Public Interest Retreat was helped by support from the Deans and the faculty of the law school.

Continued on Next Page
CONTINUED FROM PREVIOUS PAGE

2010-2011 GOALS AND EVENTS
CAREER SERVICES PROGRAMMING

The Public Interest Initiative’s plans for the 2010-2011 academic year include several presentations in conjunction with the Office of Career Services. Three programs are tentatively scheduled with other proposals being considered. The first program to be held in the fall is directed at 1Ls and will highlight different public interest career paths, which incoming students may not have considered. It will also highlight some of the other benefits of public interest work, such as loan repayment assistance.

A second program in the spring, open to all students, will feature young alumni working in various public interest jobs. They will discuss how they found employment in the field. A third program will focus on federal, state, and Wake Forest loan repayment programs available to graduates working in public interest jobs. Any alumni who are interested in attending or speaking at any of these events should contact Peter Ledford at ledfph8@wfu.edu.

INTERNSHIP DATABASE

Also in conjunction with Career Services, the Public Interest Initiative plans to create a database of public interest organizations that have hired Wake Forest students for summer internships. This database will provide contact information, payment or stipend information, and student testimonials about their experiences. If available, we will include contact information for former interns so prospective applicants can contact them about their experiences. Any alumni that would like their organization included in the database should contact Ryan Ames at amesrp8@wfu.edu.

MENTOR PROGRAM

This fall the Public Interest Initiative will be contacting alumni working in public interest positions with the goal of assembling a group of alumni mentors specifically for students planning to work in public interest careers after graduation. Students will be surveyed and matched with mentors based on desired fields, employment type, and geographic location. Any alumni interested in being a mentor should contact Amanda Thompson at thoman9@wfu.edu.

PUBLIC INTEREST RETREAT

The Public Interest Retreat was a major success last year, and we hope to build upon that momentum to make it even bigger and better this year. The retreat is tentatively scheduled for February 2011. At this time we are actively soliciting guests and speakers. Any alumni interested in participating as a guest or speaker at the Public Interest Retreat should contact Ryan Samuel at samurc9@wfu.edu.

ALUMNI DIRECTORY

We would also like to make sure that the university’s alumni directory is up to date. If you haven’t provided current contact information lately and wish to, please send it to: Alumni Records, PO Box 7227, Winston-Salem, NC 27109 or alumrec@wfu.edu.

PUBLIC INTEREST LAW ORGANIZATION

The Public Interest Initiative will also be working closely with the Public Interest Law Organization to assist in their fundraising. We hope to assist PILO with their annual auction, as well as in any other fundraising they may undertake. Any alumni interested in assisting PILO with their fundraising should contact Kathryn Hauch at hauckw9@wfu.edu.

ANNUAL PILO AUCTION

For the second year in a row, the Public Interest Law Organization (PILO) received over 50 applications for summer public interest grants. We were very excited the number of law students working in public interest, but the excitement was tempered by loss of IOLTA money for grants. Dean Morant, always an avid supporter of the law school’s public interest efforts, stepped up by finding funding to match the money received the previous year. Unfortunately PILO was not able to provide all students with grants to help offset the costs of an unpaid internship. However with the generosity of the law school’s faculty, staff, and students, PILO raised over $15,000 at the annual auction.

Each year, PILO sponsors an auction to raise money to fund grants for those who are interested in taking summer jobs working in public interest. Auction items included perennial favorites such as Professor George Walker’s watercolor paintings and a weekend in Professor Suzanne Reynolds’s log cabin. There were also new items at this year’s auction that drew the students’ attention, such as Professor Michael Green’s offer to include the winning bidder’s name in an case illustration to be published in the Third Restatement of Torts, of which Professor Green is a co-reporter.

In the upcoming year PILO is seeking opportunities to increase the number of grants we are able to award to Wake Forest law students through a 5k and increasing participation in the annual auction. Our hope is that others in the Wake Forest community will participate by donating items for auction and by attending the auction. There are tentative discussions to move the auction to a larger off-campus location to increase community and alumni participation. Please check the Public Interest Initiative website periodically for updated information on the auction.
PUBLIC INTEREST INITIATIVE

Below is a sampling of the public interest internships, which students participated in with the assistance of PILO grants:

Legal Aid of North Carolina
Winston-Salem, NC
Children’s Law Center of Central North Carolina
Winston-Salem, NC
Forsyth County Schools
Winston-Salem, NC
Lutheran Family Services Carolinas
Greensboro, NC
North Carolina School Boards Association
Raleigh, NC
Legal Services of Southern Piedmont
Charlotte, NC
Department of Homeland Security – Immigration/Customs
Charlotte, NC

Genetic Alliance
Washington, DC
Office of Attorney General
Washington, DC
Virginia Attorney General’s Office
Richmond, VA
Department of Justice
Wilmington, DE
Pa. Dept. of Education – Chief Counsel
Harrisburg, PA
U.S. Dept of Education – Civil Rights
Seattle, WA
Federal Public Defender’s Office
Nashville, TN

U.S. Attorney’s Offices
(W.D.N.C.- Charlotte, NC; S.D. Tex.-Houston, TX)
District Attorney’s Offices
(NC: New Hanover, Guilford, Mecklenburg, and Forsyth Counties)
Public Defender’s Offices
(NC: Mecklenburg, Forsyth, and Wake Counties; PA:
York County)

SPECIAL THANKS
A special thanks to Chase Wells (’10) and Aindrea Alderson (’10) for their generosity in sponsoring a public interest grant.

SUPPORT PILO
• Donate an item to be auctioned off at the annual PILO auction.  Contact Kathryn Hauch at hauckw9@wfu.edu or Jackie Willingham at willjk8@wfu.edu.
• Attend the auction and buy items.  Dates, times and details will be posted on the website.
• Sponsor a full ($2000) or a partial ($1000) grant.  Contact the alumni development office, http://law.wfu.edu/alumni/giving/how/.